Introduction

Home health care aims at supporting people with various degrees of dependency to remain at home rather than use long-term, or institutional-based nursing care. Home care providers render services in the patients' own home. These services may include combined professional health care services and life assistance services. Professional home health services could include medical and/or psychological assessment and intervention: wound care, medication teaching, pain management, disease education and management physical therapy speech therapy and occupational therapy.

Healthcare is now available at doorstep. As an extension to hospital care to get more specialized, time bounded health care, to meet the growing demand of post hospitalization or need of care affordable charges the home health care concept is taken into consideration. To ensure patient safety and provide uniform services standards (QAI Standards for Home HealthCare, Edition 1 March 2018, India) are also taken into consideration. The home health care market in India is expected to reach $6.2 billion at compound annual growth rate of 18% by 2020 (report by cyber media research).

Home health care services help patients who are recovering after hospitalization. Care given at home under direct supervision of highly experienced and trained nurse and doctor on patient within their own premises and location patients or patient wants, with the support of family member in secure and hygienic setting leads better and speedy recovery and well-being

Home healthcare works not only to control cost to individual through reducing readmission costs and transportation costs, but also improve post-hospitalization quality and good recovery within home a with quality and productive service delivery
