INTRODUCTION

Bhoruka Charitable Trust (BCT) has stepped into the 50th year of its existence in the field of integrated rural development. BCT covered various milestones and on path as directed by its founder, Late Shri Prabhu Dayal Agarwal, an entrepreneur and philanthropist.

In the year 2010-11 BCT has been strongly focusing on issues relating to three essential areas, water, health and sanitation for improving overall development of the community. Our interventions in these areas has enhanced the ways of community learning, the degree of peoples' access to knowledge and resources, and has even altered critical societal paradigms.

What differentiate BCT:

- True spirit
- Defined approach
- Clear mission
- Team work

BCT team efforts have made it possible to climb the mountain of success easily. BCT looks forward for your participation to join hands with us for underprivileged as they need your support. A step forward can assist people in every aspect and thereby allow you to take an initiative towards development and growth and nation. BCT is proud to say that it has covered a long distance but, still has more milestones ahead to achieve. BCT believes in attaining the finest position that can help people in every aspect.

Approach

Bhoruka Charitable Trust seek to conduct our work in a manner that is efficient and sustainable. BCT has established and implemented a process that allows it to provide a quick turnaround of projects, programs and initiatives. The following aspects reflect the organizational approach:

- A people-oriented approach that directly supports the beneficiary
- Partnerships with stakeholders in both the public and private sectors
- Empowerment of the most vulnerable and deprived groups of our society -women, children and those below the poverty line
- Assistance on the basis of need
- Helping those who help themselves
- Leadership by committed professionals
- Active involvement of community members in all phases of the process
- Decentralized decision making

Everyone involved with Bhoruka Charitable Trust seeks to exercise these methods of approach. BCT strive to provide individual communities with the tools and capacity to sustain our initiatives long after the work has been completed. When communities no longer seek help that is when BCT knows the work is done.

BCT believes in emphasizing on best in every aspect and most of its capacity and this allows to succeed in its programs.

Observation and learning

BCT provided an opportunity to observe the different programmes implemented at the grassroot level, many programmes were implemented in coordination with government agencies. The interaction with grass root workers was interesting and provided a perspective, about the problems at the grass root level.

The HUP project implemented by the BCT gave a good opportunity to understand the problems of the poor residing in urban slums and how to address them, the work done by BCT in this sphere has provided a good deal of information on social and living conditions in the slums.
